WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

How long have you spent circling the block to find parking in Boston, running late to your concert or a Red Sox game? Well, an app that just expanded into the city is trying to make that process easier. I spoke with the founder of ParkWhiz about how Boston actually inspired his innovation, and what it'll do for drivers here. Read more about it inside and at metro.boston.us.

TRUMP SAYS N. KOREA'S KIM INSULTED HIM

I President Donald Trump said in a tweet on Sunday that North Korean leader Kim Jong Un had insulted him by calling him "old" and said he would never call Kim "short and fat." Trump made the comment after attending the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) summit in Vietnam. In a series of tweets he also said Chinese President Xi Jinping was "upping sanctions" on North Korea in response to its nuclear and missile programs and that Xi wanted Pyongyang to "denuclearize." During Trump's visit to Beijing last week Xi reiterated that China would strive for the denuclearization of the Korean peninsula but offered no hint it would change tack on North Korea, with which it fought side by side in the 1950-53 Korean war against U.S.-led forces.

FORMER OFFICIALS: TRUMP IS BEING MANIPULATED

2 Two former top U.S. intelligence officials said they fear President Donald Trump is being manipulated by Russian President Vladimir Putin, after Trump said he believed Putin was sincere in denying Russian meddling in the 2016 election. Former CIA Director John Brennan and ex-National Intelligence Director James Clapper both said Trump was mishandling Moscow ties even as a special counsel investigates possible collusion between Trump's campaign team and Russia. "I think Mr. Trump is, for whatever reason, either intimidated by Mr. Putin, afraid of what he could do, or what might come out as a result of these investigations. ... It's either naiveté, ignorance or fear in terms of what Mr. Trump is doing vis-à-vis the Russians," Brennan said in an appearance with Clapper on CNN's "State of the Union."

FORTY UK CONSERVATIVES READY TO OUST PM MAY

4 Forty members of parliament from Prime Minister Theresa May's Conservative Party have agreed to sign a letter of no-confidence in her, the Sunday Times newspaper reported. That is eight short of the number needed to trigger a party leadership contest, the mechanism through which May could be forced from office and replaced by another Conservative. May has been struggling to maintain her authority over her party since a snap election on June 8 which she called thinking she would win by a wide margin but instead resulted in her losing her parliamentary majority. Divided over how to extricate Britain from the European Union and hit by multiple scandals involving ministers, May's government has failed to assert control over a chaotic political situation that is weakening London's hand in Brexit talks.

DEATH TOLL RISES IN IRAQ EARTHQUAKE

5 At least 61 people died in Iraq and several were killed across the border in Iran on Sunday when a strong earthquake hit the region, officials and state media in the two countries said. The U.S. Geological Survey said the quake measured a magnitude of 7.3, while an Iraqi meteorology official put its magnitude at 6.5 with the epicenter in Penjwin in Sulaimaniyah province in the Kurdistan region close to the main border crossing with Iran. Kurdish health officials said as well as at least four people being killed there were 50 injured. Across the border in Iran, state TV said several people were killed and many others injured when at least eight border villages were damaged. Electricity had been cut in the area and rescue teams had been dispatched to the area.

The ParkWhiz app just launched in Boston, letting you book a place to park.

New app in Boston lets you book parking spaces in advance

ParkWhiz was inspired by the stress of parking during Red Sox games.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

When Reepal Dalal was studying law at Boston University, she often faced a frustration most Bostonians are familiar with — the traffic that precedes a Red Sox game.

It's no secret that parking in Boston can be a headache, but when you have to battle with those heading to a baseball game, it's even worse.

As Reepal's husband Aashish Dalal explained, finding a parking spot near class on game days was a near-impossible feat. Reepal would end up driving around in circles, having to maneuver around the T and the traffic.

She came home one day and told him, "There's got to be a better way." So he created one.

Aashish is now the founder and CEO of ParkWhiz, an app that lets drivers book parking spots in advance. The Dalals moved to Chicago after Reepal finished law school, and ParkWhiz made its debut there in 2006. Now, the parking app is officially available in Boston.

"Boston is our big first outreach with regards to expansion," Aashish said. "Boston University actually became our first customer."

So how does ParkWhiz work? The company connects with operators, like parking garages and lots, and lets drivers "book" a space ahead of time. Aashish said each spot is guaranteed to be reserved; after booking, users are sent a digital parking pass they can show via their smartphones for validation.

Users can compare prices across facilities and search for specific amenities, like if you want valet service for your date night, or a secure garage as opposed to an open surface lot, or even the option to tailgate if you need parking for, say, a football game. The app also calculates how far you have to walk from parking spots to your destination.

"We also have integrations with partnerships, integrated directly with [users'] experiences," Aashish said. "One of the obvious ones is Ticketmaster. Say you're going to House of Blues in downtown Boston — you book a ticket on Ticketmaster ... and we're able to offer, through Ticketmaster, options to park [nearby], powered by ParkWhiz."

Aashish said expanding to Boston was an obvious choice, not just because his wife's driving experiences here actually inspired the app.

"When we surveyed drivers in all major cities, Boston drivers said the cost of parking major was a headache, almost 81 percent," he said. "That really stood out."

Along with ensuring you get a space, ParkWhiz can save you money, he said. Rates for a downtown Boston spot can be as low as $17 for an eight-hour workday and the company will offer deals in the future focused on congested areas, like Back Bay, Fenway Park and the Theatre District, that it says will save drivers up to 50 percent off of standard parking rates.

Aashish said Boston drivers can choose from more than 5,500 parking spots over about 100 garages through his app, and he's working to add more inventory. ParkWhiz has already been available in Chicago and New York, and the Boston expansion is the first of more to come, he added.

To celebrate the Boston expansion, the company is launching Random Acts of Parking, a campaign that will award Bostonians with free gifts like theater tickets, a dinner for you, or paying for a parking ticket. That campaign will last four weeks; check out parkwhiz.com for updates.

Aly Raisman says she was sexually abused by US team doctor

The Olympian had spoken out about sexual assault in the gymnastics industry before.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Olympic gymnast Aly Raisman has come forward with her own experience about sexual abuse, telling "60 Minutes" that she was molested by one of the U.S. women's gymnastic team doctors.

Raisman, 23, from Needham, said that she first encountered Dr. Larry Nassar when she was 15 years old. Nassar worked with the U.S. women's national gymnastics teams for more than two decades, CBS reported, and he is now in jail after he pleaded guilty to child pornography charges.

Nassar did not plead guilty to sexual assault charges, however, despite civil lawsuits against him alleging sexual abuse filed by more than 130 women, according to CBS, many of whom are former athletes.

Raisman is one of the most high-profile athletes yet to speak up about Nassar. She describes the abuse in her upcoming book, "Fierce." In her interview with "60 Minutes," she said she's often asked why Nassar's accusers didn't speak up sooner.

"Why are we looking at why didn't the girls speak up?" Raisman said. "Why not look at what about the culture? What did USA Gymnastics do, and Larry Nassar do, to manipulate these girls so much that they are so afraid to speak up?"

Rumors about sexual assault have long swirled around the world of gymnastics. In December 2016, The Indianapolis Star published an exposé in which 368 gymnasts alleged sexual exploitation at gymnastic gyms.

"I am angry," Raisman told "60 Minutes." "I'm really upset because it's been — I care a lot you know, when I see these young girls that come up to me, and they ask for pictures or autographs, whatever it is, I just — I can't — every time I look at them, every time I see them smiling, I just think — I just want to create change so that they never, ever have to go through this."

Raisman also told "60 Minutes" that she spoke to FBI investigators about Nassar after the Rio Olympics. In October, her teammate McKayla Maroney said that she was molested by the doctor as well, beginning when she was 13 years old.

Raisman had previously been outspoken about calling out how USA gymnastics handles sexual abuse scandals, specifically calling Nassar a "monster." Her interview with "60 Minutes" aired on Sunday night.

PR STUDENTS IN MASSACHUSETTS

Baker will seek funds to address influx of Puerto Rican students

Gov. Charlie Baker plans to request additional school funding from the Legislature to help cities pay for the education of hundreds of children who have arrived from Puerto Rico since Hurricane Maria battered the Caribbean island in September.

The administration sent a memo last week to municipalities and local emergency management directors outlining various services and points of contact for families arriving in Massachusetts from Puerto Rico as evacuees.

The guidance, which came from Baker's budget office, indicated that the governor will file for additional funding under the Chapter 70 program for fiscal 2018 "to ensure that school districts can draw down additional state aid for these new students, as needed."

The money, according to the administration, will be dispersed based on school districts' current per-pupil funding levels.

"We will continue to monitor these enrollment numbers through FY18 and beyond and seek additional aid for district experiencing significant enrollment increases as necessary," the memo states.

The Department of Elementary and Secondary Education says that 880 students evacuating from Puerto Rico have enrolled in public schools around Massachusetts since the hurricane, with the largest populations locating in Springfield, Worcester, Boston, Holyoke, New Bedford and Lawrence.

While it is difficult to pinpoint exactly how many Puerto Ricans have fled their homes for Massachusetts, the governor's office said that as of Wednesday morning approximately 1,300 individuals or families had applied for or received assistance from the Executive Office of Health and Human Services.

Baker convened a task force in late September with officials from the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency and the executive offices of Housing and Community Development, Health and Human Services and Education to prepare to welcome Puerto Ricans temporarily or permanently fleeing their island.

10 Celebrities that prove you can be a zaddy and a daddy

Last week, David Harbour — also known as Jim Hopper, the chain-smoking, delightfully dad-bodied resident father figure of “Stranger Things” — settled an ongoing debate in an interview with Mashable. You know, the very important question of whether Sheriff Hopper is a dad or a daddy.

“Look, at the end of the day, my biggest fear in life is that

I’m gonna wind up being an actor who plays the dad on a TV show like ‘Full House’ or ‘Small Wonder’ or something,” he said. “I’m like the desexualized dad in the show ‘Alf.’ No, that’s not what I want to play in my life. I’m a man, I’m not gonna wear dad jeans or whatever you call them... so in that way, I’d have to go with daddy.”

But we here at Metro think the question is not dad vs. daddy, but daddy vs. zaddy. We’ve talked before about what makes a zaddy — but perhaps, it is time to explore that minuscule, tenuous divide between zaddy (swag, “it” factor) and daddy (hot, delicious father figure). Here are 10 celebrities that make a close argument for both.

David Harbour

Henry Cavill

Cavill as Superman? A bore. Cavill with that pomstache? A good argument for zaddy/daddy. Schwing!

John Cho

The world has been sleeping on him, but no more. Warm me up some milk and burp me, why don’t you!

Armie Hammer

Cavill’s “Man from UNCLE” co-star is a literal father, but is also giving us zaddy vibes. Hot damn!

Edgar Ramirez

This one literally leaves us speechless. He’s a daddy, a zaddy and so much more. Teach us how to ride a bike, or something! 10/10.

Mark Ruffalo

Ruffalo is the perfect hybrid of the two most holy things in this world: daddy and zaddy. Yowza!

Michael B. Jordan

Is Michael B. Jordan a zaddy? Yes. Is he a daddy? Also yes. Huzzah!

Ryan Gosling

Gosling was once just a singing, dancing Mouseketeer. Now, he’s a father, daddy and zaddy. A real-life triple-threat. Hot tamale!

Sterling K. Brown

Brown makes us hot in the downstairs area and makes us want to be swaddled like a baby. Yikes!

Eliza Coupe is hot for the unabomber

At least, the TV version. The "Future Man" actress talks her Hollywood crushes.

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
@rachaelclemz
rachael.clemmons@metro.us

If you're familiar with Eliza Coupe — perhaps known best for her stint on "Happy Endings" — you know that she's belly achingly funny.

The 36-year-old has starred in the likes of everything from "The Mindy Project" to "Casual," but now she has a bigger role coming up in Hulu's "Future Man," an action-comedy hybrid series helmed by Seth Rogen and Evan Goldberg. Coupe stars as Tiger, a hard purple-haired, soldier from the future who suffers no bulls—t.

But instead of chatting about the new series — out on Hulu on Nov. 14 — the delightfully potty mouthed actress got distracted waxing poetic

As Tiger, Coupe comes back from the future to recruit savior Josh Hutcherson (Josh Hutcherson) — but he's not all he's cracked up to be. HUU about "Outlander," comparing Jamie Fraser to her husband, and her favorite TV shows. "I guess I forgot to be an asshole actor," she says.

How are you feeling now that your former obsession Michael Fassbender is off the market? I ended up meeting Michael Fassbender! We have a mutual friend. The whole time, I was like, "Oh, he's just a normal dude. Of course he is." It kind of ruined the whole thing for me. I'm happy somebody tamed him, I guess? I'm saying that like I think he was a wildman but let's just be honest: I know nothing.

What kind of shows are you watching right now? I just jumped on the "Outlander" train. Can we talk about f—king Jamie? My husband is the absolute love of my life. But, then there's Jamie. That guy is so hot.

"Outlander" can be a lot, sexiness wise. We're just on season two. It's so much. We also just finished watching "Manhunt" with Sam Worthington and Paul Bettany. I'm weirdly attracted to [Bettany] as the unabomber. I don't know what that says about me. It wasn't Sam Worthington — who is f—king gorgeous — getting me all riled up. It's the f—king unabomber.

Experimental beers are now on tap at Sam Adams' new Brewery Tap Room.

Located within the walls of the Jamaica Plain brewery's base for research and development, the cozy, brick-walled Tap Room offers beer-lovers the chance to hang out and taste some of Sam Adams' latest creations. The craft brewery is also opening a Bier Keller — German for beer cellar — to age barrel-aged beers.

Behind the bar are 20 taps, which will pour both innovative styles and long-time best sellers. Among them are the juicy, hazy Sam Adams New England IPA, which is just beginning its roll-out in select cities this year, plus seasonal brews like Winter Lager and a host of experimental beers only available in the Tap Room.

The Tap Room itself offers a low-key, homey environment, complete with plush brown couches, shuffleboard and long tables with benches. Food trucks and food vendors will often be available, and a series of special events including trivia nights and karaoke will also be hosted at the brewery's new addition.

Alongside the Tap Room, the brewery's expansion includes the Sam Adams Bier Keller across the road. Formerly used by the pre-prohibition Haffenreffer Brewery, the Keller houses experimental barrel-aged barleywines, oak-aged saisons and scotch ales aging in scotch whiskey barrels, among others.

The brewery will offer tastings at the Bier Keller featuring brewery-only, barrel-aged beer and select seasonal cheese pairings on Mondays and Fridays at 3:30 p.m.

'Janesville' wins Business Book of the Year Award

Amy Goldstein's work was honored at a ceremony hosted by the Financial Times and McKinsey & Co.

PAT KING
@MetroNewYork
patrick.king@metrout.us

There are many unsung genres in the publishing world that don't get their due amidst a sea of swashbuckling fantasy epics and heart-wrenching memoirs. One of the most overlooked categories are business books. For some, this is justly so. On the surface, that label can send readers running toward the graphic novel section in order to find anything with less of a granite-thick context. But many people may not realize that these authors are writing some of the best examples of long-form journalism and progressive thinking that you will be able to find.

The Financial Times and McKinsey & Co. both understand this, and the two companies have again partnered to host the 13th annual Business Book of the Year Award to highlight literature that provides "the most compelling and enjoyable insight into modern business issues, including management, finance, and economics." This year's award ceremony (and dinner) was held Monday, Nov. 6 at the elegant Lotte Palace Hotel in Midtown Manhattan. The event was emceed by Lionel Barber, editor at the Financial Times, and Dominic Barton, global managing partner of McKinsey & Co. The award was judged by both Barber and Barton along with a panel of judges comprised of some of the most prominent figures in the business world.

Before the main event, Barber welcomed broadcasting legend and business and publishing mogul Barry Diller for a freewheeling and enjoyable "fireside chat." The conversation covered a wide variety of topics such as journalistic integrity, the responsibility of social media companies and Harvey Weinstein.

Finally, it was time to announce the winner of Business Book of the Year. The award was given to Amy Goldstein's "Janesville: An American Story," which chronicled the harrowing experiences of a small-town community in the wake of a General Motors assembly plant closure in the midst of the Great Recession of 2008. Goldstein, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist for The Washington Post, had spent years profiling the people of Janesville, Wisconsin (Paul Ryan's hometown), in the wake of the financial collapse in order to paint this moving portrait of American resilience in the face of adversity.

"I think the thing that I'm most honored by," said Goldstein during her acceptance speech, "is that the Financial Times and McKinsey have a definition of business books that is expansive enough to include a book that's about the effect of a business decision ... I had the feeling that we all knew what the economic statistics were like in the Great Recession but we really didn't know what it was like to lose the best work in town. That's the story I tried to tell in 'Janesville: An American Story.'"

Fitness industry is 'out of shape'

Author and fitness expert Bobby Whisnand says the fitness industry is filled with frauds.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matt.burke@metro.us

New Year's resolutions are right around the corner, which means many people who currently aren't going to the gym will start back up again, and many people who are currently going to the gym — but only go once or twice a week — might sign up for a personal trainer in order to get better results.

If you're one of the many thinking of jumping in with both feet into this world, however, it's a good idea to have a strong bulls— detector — according to veteran personal trainer and exercise therapy specialist Bobby Whisnand.

Getting the 'right look' takes priority over actual health in today's fitness industry. GETTY IMAGES

Between trainers at major gym chains who receive fly-by-night certificates, the teaching of bad exercise form, anabolic steroids, supplements and false advertising, Whisnand says the fitness industry — years after its boom period — has become a complete joke.

"Most fitness instructors with overnight certifications have a complete disregard for form and technique," Whisnand told Metro. "Backs and joints — people are actually depleting their health by the way they're being taught to exercise. You hear, 'no pain, no gain' and 'pain is just weakness leaving the body,' that sort of stuff. It's crap."

Whisnand has been in the fitness industry since 1990 and has a new book titled "Fitness Frauds: Exposing the Truth About Drugs, Lies and Flex Appeal."

He states: "My goals with this book are simple: to expose the personal training and exercise instructor industry for what it really is; to uncover the truth about drug use in all areas of fitness; to show you what's hiding behind the smoke, mirrors and masquerades within the fitness advertisements; to clean up the dirty truth behind the food, nutrition and weight-loss industries and to give you my solutions to right the ship of fitness and wellness."

Exercise is in no way "bad" for you, obviously. Whisnand's main gripe is simply the fraudulent nature of this multi-billion dollar industry in 2017. Looking good at any price trumps actual health for many, and that's a glaring problem.

"Exercising how you want or taking drugs to help things along is absolutely your right and your business; that's not my point with this book," Whisnand said. "But when fraudulent means and methods are used to make personal gains at the expense of others, especially when it comes to health, the crooks need to be exposed."

Overnight certifications

Whisnand says that the majority of trainers, even at major gym chains, have had little to no training.

"The certifications are meaningless," he told Metro. "I've got them, and I believe they're meaningless. I've got all of them. These trainers can be convicted felons and there's no way to check that. They put people through the same exercises over and over and at the end it's like, 'OK, your 10-pack of personal training sessions is up, write me a check.'"

Improper technique is one of Whisnand's major concerns and he says that many trainers do not really care about the person who goes to the gym once a week or once a month. In most cases, the trainers know the results aren't going to be there anyway. So, what's the point of hammering home proper technique?

"You see it at the gym in every corner — exercises involving the knees and the back. People are going way too fast," Whisnand said. "There's an improper alignment of the body. If you look at squats — there should be a full pause. Knees are way out over the toes. The back is compromised. You see jerky motions, popping, bad posture. The trainers, they're just like, 'C'mon, get it up, bro.' That sort of thing. It's bad form ... you can't see what's wrong until you know what's right. That's the problem."

Steroids and supplements

Jealous of that absolutely ripped guy or girl at the gym?

Well, don't be. He or she is probably on something that will affect their longterm health negatively.

"Professional sports have nothing on the fitness industry," Whisnand told Metro. "I don't care if you're talking about your 60-year-old tennis player or your 60-year-old walking around with a 20-year-old's body. The industry is completely saturated with anabolic steroids, illegal fat burners, blood doping, diuretics ... it's everywhere."

There is a growing thought by many in the industry that steroids — in moderation — are just fine for you. It's a theory that Whisnand dismisses immediately.

"You might as well drink gasoline. You can drink gasoline and get away with it too," Whisnand said. "If you're going to take drugs, take 'em. I really don't care. But quit lying about it. When these companies sell their product or service and tell people — you can get this look from nothing but exercise — yeah, right."

business, Whisnand says that it is completely unregulated.

"We have to question the ingredients," Whisnand said. "Most of the supplements that people buy — they are not made by the distributor.

They're made by manufacturing labs, most of them in China. And the lab determines the quality. A company can list a group of ingredients — this is a loophole — all they have to do is list the molecular weight of the total complex or the total blend. They don't have to list the individual amounts so the very ingredient that we want could be less than 1 percent of the total blend ... and they don't have to tell you."

Whisnand goes into these topics and more in his book, "Fitness Frauds" Exposing the Truth About Drugs, Lies and Flex Appeal." The book is due out in January 2018. For more information visit BobbyWhisnand.com

Aries Stay focused on what you need to accomplish. Getting along with your peers will make your life and job easier. Your intelligence and skills will not go unnoticed.

Taurus Talk is cheap, but it may lead to an opportunity if you connect with former co-workers. A relationship with someone special will make you a better person.

Gemini Stay in the zone and think matters through before you say what's on your mind. Emotional misrepresentation will get you in trouble instead of helping you find a solution.

Cancer Take care of responsibilities to avoid criticism and complaints. Once you are free to do what you wish, engage in something you enjoy or that will boost your confidence.

Leo Plan to have some fun. The less time you spend at home or with someone who is over-reacting or a poor influence, the better. Make positive change your goal.

Virgo Assess what you have accomplished and what's still on your bucket list. Set a timeline and don't lose sight of the goals you have yet to achieve.

Libra Talk, but don't share personal information or passwords. Active pursuit of knowledge and skills that will help you get ahead should be your top priority.

Scorpio Be open to trying new things. Engage in unusual pastimes that will help you develop your skills. A change at home will turn out better than anticipated.

Sagittarius Take action, as your words will mean nothing if you don't follow through. Trust in yourself only when dealing with friends or relatives making promises.

Capricorn Keep up with technology or the changes occurring within your chosen field. Knowledge is power, and it can help you gain ground regardless of your station.

Aquarius Gather information and learn all you can before engaging in a debate with someone. A physical challenge will help calm your nerves. Avoid indulgence.

Pisces A change in your financial position will help you lift some of your restrictions. Someone you have worked with in the past will give you an interesting lead. EUGENIA LAST
